

San Antonio, TX-Congressman Ciro D. Rodriguez (TX-23) today announced he would join several members of Congress as an original cosponsor of legislation that would make June National Internet Safety Month

, and bring attention to the work law enforcement is doing to crack down on child predators, identity theft and other cyber crime. Rodriguez made the announcement while at Rawlinson Middle School in San Antonio with a Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) expert, a San Antonio Police Department officer, and educators and students from the middle school.

"The internet has a number of safe, enjoyable activities that children can use for educational or entertainment purposes," said Rodriguez. "But as a parent, I worry about the dangers our children may face when they are online and feeling safe within the walls of their own home. As school gets out and children spend more time home alone, National Internet Safety Month will bring attention to the dangers people are faced with when they use the internet and will help people to know when to speak to their parents or the authorities about improper or illegal activities."

87% of teens say they use the Internet on a regular basis, according to the U.S. Department of Justice. They are using the internet for research, education, communicating with friends and other entertainment.

The Federal Trade Commission in coordination with several other Federal Agencies, maintains OnGuard Online, a web-based resource to educate Americans about Internet Safety.

"It is important to remember that although the internet can open new doors to information it can also be a dangerous place when someone is looking to cause harm from another computer that can be in the same town or thousands of miles away," continued Rodriguez.

Additionally, Congressman Rodriguez's Office has created a tip sheet to be offered on his web site for parents, educators and others to allow for better protection of children, seniors and ourselves from cyber criminals.

Below are some of the tips offered:

1. Don't share your last name, phone number, address, birthday, or other personal information without a parent's permission.
2. Tell your parents right away if you come across information or a person online that makes you scared or nervous.
3. Check with your parents before emailing or posting a picture on a website
4. Never meet an online friend in person without talking to a parent first.
5. Show your parents which websites you enjoy visiting and tell them about any strangers you meet online.
6. Check out websites like www.fbi.gov, www.ftc.gov, and www.usdoj.gov for other ways you can protect yourself.
7. Trust your instincts! If something doesn't seem right or makes you feel uncomfortable, tell your parents.
